Preface

This volume is devoted to advances in databases and information systems, one of the many active research areas in Computer Science within the broader field of Computing (or Informatics, as it is also called). The chapters in this monograph were actually papers on the program of the 6th Conference on Advances in Databases and Information Systems (ADBIS), held on September 8–11, 2002 in Bratislava, Slovakia.

The series of ADBIS Conferences is a successor of the annual international workshops under the same title, which were organized by the Moscow ACM SIGMOD Chapter during 1993–1996. In 1997, the 1st East European Conference on Advances in Databases and Information Systems was held in St. Petersburg, Russia, and the series was continued in Poznan, Poland in 1998, Maribor, Slovenia in 1999, Prague, Czech Republic in 2000, Vilnius, Lithuania in 2001, and now in Bratislava, Slovakia in 2002. The ADBIS Conference has become the premier event gathering researchers Central and Eastern Europe working in the area, providing an internationally recognized forum for presentation of their research results. More than that, the ADBIS conference has evolved into one of the important European conferences in the area, but also one which is attended by researchers from all over the world.

There is no better way to support the above statements than to give basic data about the ADBIS 2002 Conference. It was organized by the Slovak University of Technology (STU) in Bratislava (and, in particular, its Faculty of Electrical Engineering and Information Technology) in cooperation with the ACM SIGMOD, the Moscow ACM SIGMOD Chapter, and the Slovak Society for Computer Science. It attracted 115 submissions from 35 countries on all continents, alas, except Africa. The submissions were subject to a rigorous review process with each paper having been reviewed by three and sometimes even more referees. The ADBIS Conference is known for its continuous effort to set and comply with high quality standards with respect to the accepted papers. This makes the selection process even more difficult for the Program Committee (PC) and, eventually, the PC coauthors and volume editors, since many submitted papers could not be included in this volume, although they were considered as good ones in general. After many live and online discussions, 25 full papers and 4 short papers were accepted for inclusion in this volume, constituting the ADBIS 2002 Conference proceedings.

The high number of submissions is a clear sign that the ADBIS Conference series has acquired a worldwide interest and recognition. The authors of this volume come from 22 countries on four continents. Interestingly enough, Eastern Europe is no longer the most heavily represented region. This shows that while the ADBIS Conference maintains its focus, facilitating collaboration between researchers from that region and other parts of the world, it has also already become a fully international event that is standard by all the relevant criteria.

Besides these 29 regular papers, this volume includes also three invited papers that were presented at the conference as invited lectures. We are happy that we could include invited papers on such attractive topics in the area, as Web Site Modelling, Privacy and Security in ASP and Web Service Environments, and Infrastructure for Information Spaces, presented by very prominent authorities in the field. The conference program was complemented by two tutorials and several research communications.

We should like to thank:

- all the reviewers, and the PC members in particular, who made this volume and, in fact, the 2002 ADBIS Conference possible by volunteering to review in accordance with strict criteria of scientific merit;
- the Steering Committee of the ADBIS Conferences, and, in particular, its Chairman, Leonid Kalinichenko, for their guidance and advice;
- the Organizing Committee, and, in particular, its Chairwoman Maria Bielikova, for their very effective support in the technical preparation of this proceedings and in making the conference happen;
- Springer-Verlag for publishing these proceedings, and Alfred Hofmann, in particular, for effective support in producing them;
- last, but not least, the authors of the chapters in this volume, for contributing such excellent papers reporting their recent research results.

We hope that these proceedings will be useful to the researchers and academics that work in the area of Databases and Information Systems. Thus, we anticipate that in the future the interest of the research community in the ADBIS Conference series will continue to increase.
