Foreword

Twenty-five years ago, the first of two NATO workshops to discuss the software crisis was held at Garmisch-Partenkirchen. From these workshops, the discipline of software engineering was born. Now, the fourth European Software Engineering Conference returns to Garmisch to celebrate this 25th anniversary and to look forward to the next 25 years.

More than 135 papers were submitted to ESEC'93 out of which the 27 papers in these Proceedings were accepted. Papers were submitted from most European countries, from the US, Canada, Japan and other Asian countries. Quality was the principal selection criterion for selected papers but the Programme Committee also wanted to ensure that the papers presented included both advanced academic research and the industrial use of software engineering technology.

We have therefore a mixture of themes. Some, such as Software Engineering and CSCW, are forward looking and anticipate future developments; others, such as Systems Engineering, are more concerned with the reports of practical industrial applications. Some sessions, such as that on Software Reuse, reflect the fact that some of the concerns first raised in 1968 remain unsolved problems. The increasing importance of requirements engineering is reflected by the inclusion of two sessions on this topic. The long-term research objectives of understanding the software process and the development of effective environmental support are also covered here.

The submitted papers are complemented by presentations from distinguished invited speakers from Europe and North America. Invited papers cover real-time systems, software measurement and metrics, and industrial software engineering practice. We are particularly pleased to welcome our introductory speakers Professors F.L. Bauer and J. Buxton who played a large part in 1968 and 1969 workshops and who have made a major contribution to the development of software engineering.

The organisation of a major conference is impossible without a great deal of help and support. We are grateful to the members of the Programme Committee and to other reviewers for their time. Pere Botella and Johannes Siedersleben the Tutorial and the Tools Fair organisers have made an important contribution to the success of ESEC'93. Particular thanks also to Jacqui Forsyth at Lancaster University and to Uta Weber at the Technical University of Munich who provided invaluable help with the technical and the local organisation.

European work in software engineering is now comparable with the best in the world and in some fields, such as the use of formal methods, it is generally recognised that European work is pre-eminent. We believe that this series of ESEC conferences, first established in 1987, has contributed to this and we are confident that ESEC'93 will continue the high standard of its predecessors.
