Dear colleagues:

We reached the last quarter of 2020. This first issue of Volume 100 is ‘unusually heavy’, larger than previous issues. The reason is simple: we want to ‘empty’ the queue of accepted papers. The objective is to switch to continuous publication on January 1, which benefits all authors as their accepted papers will appear shortly after they are accepted in final form. Therefore, JINT offers to all of you, and to the wider readership, an additional incentive to submit your papers. Do so; we will handle your submissions and provide you with detailed and just feedback. JINT is you.

Enjoy the issue.
