System dynamics in Europe today—a review of professional infrastructure and academic programmes

J Morecroft, P Milling, and P Davidsen

Part 1 traces the growth and development of system dynamics in Europe over a period of 30 years. The era begins with a small band of academic pioneers in the UK and Germany in the early 1970s and ends with a network of universities and entrepreneurial commercial ventures spread across Europe and beyond in the late 1990s.
